

Recommendations of RBL Site

1. Vision and mission highlights specifically with photos
2. Videos and accounts should be maintained with the name of Red Brigade
3. Mentioned self-defense, leadership, activism - mention stories with examples, add photos, elaborate definition of themes also add skills which are ongoing workshops
4. Our story- elaborate and make vast, it was too short
5. Add first core leadership and after purpose
6. In our work have to add whatever sessions, programs, events, skills
7. workshop for women empowerment happened with photos and videos
8. In Achievements add every single recognized award include all red brigade leaders with photos and videos
9. In research and publication who came for research also published add their details like intention of their to do research in details
10. Add red brigade's ethics, rules, moto(uddesh)
11. Add donation either last page or at bottom where all accounts address

RED BRIGADE LUCKNOW

NISHASTRA — Re-creating Self Defense & Self Image

Madiyaon, Lucknow, Uttar Pradesh | India

WEBSITE CONTENT UPGRADE

Professional Content for Four Key Sections

Our Programs, Events & Skills Workshops

Red Brigade Lucknow (RBL) runs a wide range of programs, campaigns, and skill-building workshops — all designed and led by survivors, for survivors. Every program listed here has been developed from real lived experiences of women and girls from marginalised communities. These are not charity programs; they are tools of transformation.

1. NISHASTRA — Self Defense Training

[PHOTO PLACEHOLDER: Training session in school/community. VIDEO PLACEHOLDER: 2–3 min NISHASTRA demonstration reel]

NISHASTRA (New Instrument against Sexual Harassment and Stand Against Rape Aggression) is Red Brigade's original, survivor-developed self-defense technique. Unlike conventional sports-based self-defense (martial arts, karate, Krav Maga), NISHASTRA was built entirely from the real experiences of survivors — women who courageously re-shared their stories of violence so that no other girl would have to face it unprepared.

Why NISHASTRA is Different

- Designed for 5–10 second deployment — the realistic window in an attack situation
- Requires no special fitness level — developed for anaemic, malnourished women in marginalised communities
- Works in confined spaces and unknown situations — unlike sport-based techniques
- the body's natural reflex response to danger
- Targets anatomical weaknesses of attackers rather than matching muscle power
- Simple enough to remember without daily practice
- Covers all forms of sexual violence: eve-teasing, domestic settings, workplaces, public transport, and public spaces

Reach & Scale

Total trained	Over 2,00,000 adolescent girls and women across India
Schools covered	500 schools across 13 states; 250 schools within Lucknow district alone
Villages covered	450 villages across 13 states; 150 within Lucknow district
States reached	13 states and 75 districts across India
International recognition	Initiatives noticed in approximately 60 countries worldwide

2. 100 Days 100 Schools / 100 Days 100 Villages

[PHOTO PLACEHOLDER: Outdoor training sessions in villages. VIDEO PLACEHOLDER: Campaign reel — team traveling to remote locations]

These are intensive outreach campaigns in which the Red Brigade team travels to 100 schools or 100 villages within a 100-day period to deliver NISHASTRA training, awareness sessions, and community dialogues on sexual violence. These campaigns are especially designed to reach girls and women in areas with limited institutional support.

- Combines self-defense training with discussions on women freedom fighters from India's independence movement
- Invites current women leaders from Lucknow as guests to connect history with the present
- Sessions include the psychological self-image exercise that challenges externally imposed self-doubt

3. Raat Ka Ujala (Light of the Night)

[PHOTO PLACEHOLDER: Night march with candles/torches. VIDEO PLACEHOLDER: Community members speaking at Raat Ka Ujala events]

Held annually from 16 to 29 September in memory of Nirbhaya (Delhi gang rape, 2012), Raat Ka Ujala is a night-safety activism campaign. Red Brigade takes to the streets at night to reclaim public spaces for women — a powerful symbolic and practical demonstration that women have the right to move freely at all hours.

- Conducted in Lucknow and across partner cities
 - Includes community marches, street plays (Nukkad Natak), and awareness programmes
 - Involves schools, colleges, community groups, and partner organisations
-

4. 18 Days Activism — National Women's Day Campaign (13 February – 2 March)

[PHOTO PLACEHOLDER: Scooty yatra photos, march images. VIDEO PLACEHOLDER: Highlights reel of 18 Days Activism across years]

Red Brigade revived and popularised India's National Women's Day — celebrated on 13 February to mark the birth anniversary of Sarojini Naidu. Since 2018, Red Brigade has organised 18 continuous days of activism from National Women's Day (13 February) to the date of Sarojini Naidu's passing (2 March).

Key Events in the Series

- 2018 — 18-Girl Vehicle March from Sarojini Naidu's birthplace (Golden Threshold, Hyderabad) to her final resting place (Raj Bhavan, Lucknow)
- Annual Scooty Yatra across all blocks of Lucknow district
- Salute to Sarojini programmes — cultural events, women's leadership forums
- 2023 — 350 km, 18-day Padyatra (foot march) by 50 girls from Jhankaribai's birthplace (Bhojla, Jhansi) to Sarojini's inspiration site in Lucknow
- Celebrated in 150+ cities across Uttar Pradesh, Telangana, and Madhya Pradesh
- Adopted by Samajwadi Party for statewide celebrations across all UP districts; celebrated by Rajiv Gandhi Foundation in 2022

This campaign is one of the most significant contributions of Red Brigade to the revival of women's historical memory in India.

5. Hinsa Mukht Jeevan (Violence-Free Life) — 12-Day Activism

Held annually from 21 September to 2 October, this 12-day campaign focuses on mobilising women and girls to pledge for violence-free living. Events include community rallies, survivor testimonials, workshops on legal rights, and pledging ceremonies in schools.

[PHOTO PLACEHOLDER: Pledge ceremony photos with large gatherings. VIDEO PLACEHOLDER: Survivor testimonials from Hinsa Mukht Jeevan]

6. Fight Against 936

A targeted campaign addressing sexual harassment in public spaces, using creative activism, community reporting mechanisms, and local advocacy to make neighbourhoods safer for women and girls.

7. Balmanch — Education and Rehabilitation Centre

[PHOTO PLACEHOLDER: Children studying at Balmanch. VIDEO PLACEHOLDER: Tour of Balmanch and interaction with students]

Balmanch is Red Brigade's community education centre based in Madiyaon, Lucknow. It serves as both a learning space for children from marginalised communities and a rehabilitation and engagement centre for survivors. Annu — one of Red Brigade's own self-defense trainers and a survivor — was once a student here. Today, she coordinates Balmanch. This is the living example of Red Brigade's model: victims becoming leaders.

8. Chikankari Women's Economic Empowerment Programme

[PHOTO PLACEHOLDER: Women doing Chikankari embroidery work. VIDEO PLACEHOLDER: Interview with Chikankari women on economic independence]

Lucknow's unorganised Chikankari (embroidery) sector employs hundreds of thousands of women, most of them from marginalised communities in extremely exploitative conditions. Red Brigade works directly with this network of women to provide livelihood skill development, organising support, and economic empowerment — enabling them to negotiate better wages, understand their rights, and build financial independence.

9. Justice Access Support

Red Brigade has a dedicated team that supports survivors through the entire legal process — from filing an FIR at the police station, to navigating state agencies, to attending court proceedings. This team ensures that no survivor has to face the legal system alone.

Cases supported	Over 200 women helped to register and prosecute cases of sexual violence
Convictions secured	At least 5 rape survivors supported through to successful court convictions
First conviction	2013 — Red Brigade's first case resulting in a successful legal outcome
Support includes	Counselling, shelter, legal accompaniment, and post-judgment support

10. Women Freedom Fighters Research & Awareness Programme

[PHOTO PLACEHOLDER: Exhibition boards on women freedom fighters. VIDEO PLACEHOLDER: Workshop where girls learn about freedom fighters]

Red Brigade has researched and documented approximately 250 women freedom fighters who contributed to India's independence struggle between 1857 and 1947, with focused research on 100 women warriors. This history is largely unsung — unknown to most young Indians.

Red Brigade brings these stories to life in workshops, conferences, foot marches, and campaigns — telling them not as history lessons but as living inspiration. Girls who know that women like them fought and died for this country carry themselves differently.

11. National Conference on Self Defense

[PHOTO PLACEHOLDER: Conference hall with participants. VIDEO PLACEHOLDER: Highlights reel and speaker clips from conference sessions]

Red Brigade is organising a National Conference on Self Defense in metropolitan cities across India to mainstream self-defense as a public health, policy, and educational priority. The conference addresses a critical gap: despite evidence that self-defense reduces sexual violence, it remains absent from national and state policy, academic curricula, and institutional frameworks.

Conference Objectives

- Establish self-defense as a preventive intervention against sexual violence
- Introduce policy mandates for self-defense in schools, colleges, and community systems
- Promote research and field-based documentation on self-defense effectiveness
- Strengthen the link between self-defense training and mental health and self-image
- Build national partnerships with educational institutions, universities, and youth groups
- Encourage adoption of NISHASTRA across different states

Expected Participants (300–500 per city)

- Survivor leaders, women and girls, students and youth
- Researchers, mental health experts, legal professionals
- School and university representatives, government departments
- Police representatives, media, CSR and philanthropic institutions

Latest research from Azim Premji University in collaboration with Red Brigade Lucknow has documented a correlation between areas where self-defense training is prevalent and lower rates of sexual violence. This research is central to the conference agenda.

Achievements & Awards

Red Brigade Lucknow has received recognition from governments, civil society institutions, international media, and academic bodies across India and the world. Every award listed here is a recognition not just of the organisation, but of the survivors who built it.

[INSTRUCTION FOR WEBSITE TEAM: Each award entry should have a dedicated photo — either of the award ceremony, the leader receiving the award, or the award certificate. Video clips of award acceptance speeches should be embedded where available.]

National & Government Awards

[PHOTO PLACEHOLDER: Award ceremony images for each entry below]

Savdhan India Award	Awarded by national TV programme for outstanding contribution to women's safety
Stree Shakti Award	Government recognition for exemplary work in women empowerment

Mind of Steel Award	Awarded for resilience and determination in fighting sexual violence
Devi Award	Recognised for transformational leadership by women
Women in Public Life by President	Honoured by the President of India for public service
No More Kamzor Campaign	Institutional recognition for the programme combating internalised weakness in women
Mission Sapne	Award for innovative community-based intervention for women and girls
KBC — Kaun Banega Crorepati	Featured on national television as inspirational social work story
Forbes India Magazine 2020	Listed among India's Top 20 Women Achievers
The Republic of Women	Recognition for survivor-led leadership model
Maja Koene Social Activist Award	International social activist award recognising impact
Government of India Recognition	Multiple recognitions from central government ministries
Government of UP Recognition	Multiple state-level honors from the Government of Uttar Pradesh

International Recognition

[PHOTO PLACEHOLDER: International media coverage screenshots, foreign delegation visits, documentary stills]

Red Brigade's work has been noticed in approximately 60 countries. The organisation has been the subject of several national and international media stories and documentaries.

International Media Coverage

- CNN — 'Meet India's Red Brigade: The teens fighting back against rape' (August 2013)
- Deutsche Welle (DW) — 'India's Red Brigade' (March 2016)
- The National News — 'Red Brigade: Empowering women of India to fight back'
- The Things (US) — Featured among '15 Awesome Vigilantes That Really Fight Crime' (2016)
- Multiple international documentaries and academic feature articles

[PHOTO PLACEHOLDER: Screenshots of international media logos and headlines. VIDEO PLACEHOLDER: Compilation of international media clips]

National Media Recognition

The Hindu — 'Red, black and Krav Maga: Lucknow's Red Brigade is empowering young women' (August 2017)

- Times of India — 'Red Brigade: Force that teaches girls to beat harassers' (September 2016)
- Navbharat Times — Red Brigade Scooty Yatra coverage (December 2017)

- Hindustan Times — Coverage of violence-free economy initiative (October 2022)
- The Pioneer — 'Red Brigade Trust helping women, girls protect themselves' (November 2020)
- India Legal — Coverage of rape justice cases supported by Red Brigade (October 2017)

Red Brigade Leaders — Individual Recognitions

[INSTRUCTION: Add individual photos of each leader with their award/recognition. Video interviews with leaders reflecting on their journey should be linked here.]

Usha Vishwakarma — Founder

[PHOTO PLACEHOLDER: Usha Vishwakarma receiving awards, speaking at national events, in field sessions. VIDEO PLACEHOLDER: Usha's interview — her journey from survivor to nationally recognised leader]

Usha Vishwakarma founded Red Brigade in 2011 after surviving an attempted rape in 2006. From a family of blacksmiths who migrated from village Goodi, District Basti, UP to Lucknow's slums, she built India's largest survivor-led self-defense organisation from a group of 15 girls. She has been recognised by the Government of India, the Government of Uttar Pradesh, Forbes India, and dozens of national and international bodies.

A Celebration of Women

Named 'Woman of Action' — international recognition (October 2013)

Forbes India 2020

Top 20 Women Achievers in India

National TV Coverage

KBC, multiple news channels — recognised as an inspirational figure

Government of India

Multiple ministry-level recognition for women's safety work

Government of UP

State-level recognition for social activism and survivor leadership

Manshi — Survivor, Self-Defense Trainer & Chikankari Programme Leader

[PHOTO PLACEHOLDER: Manshi training girls, leading Chikankari programme. VIDEO PLACEHOLDER: Manshi speaking about her journey from victim to leader]

Manshi came to Red Brigade as a deeply traumatised survivor of childhood sexual abuse and repeated victimisation. Through Red Brigade's healing process, she transformed into a core team member, certified self-defense trainer, and the leader of the Chikankari Women's Programme. Her story is cited by Red Brigade as the defining example of victim mindset to leadership.

Annu — Survivor, Self-Defense Trainer & Balmanch Coordinator

[PHOTO PLACEHOLDER: Annu coordinating at Balmanch, training girls. VIDEO PLACEHOLDER: Annu's story — from student at Balmanch to its coordinator]

Annu was a 12-year-old girl from a broken family who was repeatedly abused by a family member. Red Brigade rescued her, supported her through five years in a government shelter home, never lost touch with her, and brought her back into its team. Today she is a self-defense trainer and the coordinator of Balmanch — the same education centre where she was once a student. She is perhaps the most powerful symbol of Red Brigade's model.

Diya — Survivor, Fighter for Justice

[PHOTO PLACEHOLDER: Diya at a community event if available, or representational image of her community. VIDEO PLACEHOLDER: Case summary narrated by Red Brigade team]

At 14, Diya survived an attempted rape in Mistripur, Lucknow, where the perpetrator had powerful connections and her complaint was initially refused registration. Red Brigade took up her case, provided shelter, and supported her through the entire legal process — travelling with her from Mistripur to Lucknow for every court date. The perpetrator was imprisoned. Today, Diya is married and a mother — a life rebuilt, not merely survived.

Research, Books & Academic Recognition

Multiple academic institutions in India and internationally have published research and books on Red Brigade. Details of these are covered in the Research & Publications section of this document.

[PHOTO PLACEHOLDER: Book covers, research report covers, academic institution logos]

Research & Publications

Red Brigade Lucknow is not only a grassroots organisation — it is a site of knowledge production. The organisation's model, its NISHASTRA technique, and its survivor-leadership approach have attracted serious academic and research attention from India and across the world. Listed below are the key research engagements, publications, and documentation projects involving Red Brigade.

[INSTRUCTION FOR WEBSITE TEAM: For each research/publication entry, add the book cover or report cover image, the institution's logo, and a PDF download link where permission has been given by the authors. Video interviews with researchers reflecting on their work with Red Brigade should be linked where available.]

1. Azim Premji University — Self Defense and Sexual Violence Prevention Study

[PHOTO PLACEHOLDER: Azim Premji University logo, research team photo if available. VIDEO PLACEHOLDER: Researcher interview / findings presentation clip]

Institution	Azim Premji University, India
Research focus	Correlation between self-defense training prevalence and rates of sexual violence
Key finding	Areas where NISHASTRA self-defense training is prevalent show lower rates of sexual violence
Collaboration	Conducted in direct collaboration with Red Brigade Lucknow
Significance	First major academic evidence-base for NISHASTRA as a preventive intervention against sexual violence
Context	Used as the primary research evidence for the National Conference on Self Defense proposal

This research is of national significance. It provides the first empirical validation of what Red Brigade has demonstrated through practice for over a decade — that prevention through self-defense training meaningfully reduces sexual violence. The findings are being used to advocate for self-defense policy at the national level.

2. 'Women in Red' — Published Book

[PHOTO PLACEHOLDER: Book cover of Women in Red. VIDEO PLACEHOLDER: Book launch or author interview clip]

Title	Women in Red
Author	Eva J.
Publisher	Blurb
URL	https://www.blurb.com/b/9556863-women-in-red
Focus	Documentation of Red Brigade's journey, members, and impact in visual and narrative form
Significance	One of the earliest international book-length documentations of Red Brigade's work

3. 'A Celebration of Women' — Usha Vishwakarma Profile

[PHOTO PLACEHOLDER: A Celebration of Women website screenshot, Usha's profile page]

Platform	A Celebration of Women — international platform recognising women leaders
-----------------	---

Profile	Usha Vishwakarma — Woman of Action
Published	October 2013
URL	https://acelebrationofwomen.org/2013/10/usha-vishwakarma-woman-of-action/
Significance	One of the first international academic/documentary recognitions of Usha and Red Brigade

4. National & State Level Academic Research

[PHOTO PLACEHOLDER: University and institution logos. VIDEO PLACEHOLDER: Researcher testimonials about their experience studying Red Brigade]

Multiple academic institutions have published research papers, dissertations, and books on Red Brigade's model. The organisation welcomes researchers from social work, gender studies, law, public health, and allied fields. Research visits are typically structured around:

- Observation and documentation of NISHASTRA training sessions
- Case study documentation with survivor consent — tracing the pathway from crisis to empowerment
- Community interaction and needs assessment with Chikankari workers and community women
- Organisational analysis — examining how a survivor-led model structures accountability and programme design
- Theoretical exploration of intersectionality, survivor agency, and feminist organising

Red Brigade represents a rare research site where the boundary between 'beneficiary' and 'change agent' is deliberately and politically dissolved — a fact noted consistently by researchers as theoretically significant for feminist social work discourse.

[ACTION FOR WEBSITE TEAM: List each institution and researcher name here once permissions are confirmed. Include the title of their work, year of publication, and a brief note on what drew them to Red Brigade and what they found. Add researcher photos and institutional logos.]

5. Media Documentation

Red Brigade's work has been the subject of extensive media documentation that also serves as a public record of the organisation's impact over time. Key documented stories include:

CNN (2013)	'Meet India's Red Brigade: The teens fighting back against rape' — one of the earliest international long-form stories on RBL
Deutsche Welle (2016)	'India's Red Brigade' — international documentary-style coverage
The Hindu (2017)	'Red, black and Krav Maga: Lucknow's Red Brigade is empowering young women' — detailed coverage of NISHASTRA technique
New Indian Express (2020)	'Led by sexual assault survivor, Lucknow's Red Brigade empowers women through martial arts'
Hindustan Times (2022)	'Women come together in Lucknow to build non-violent economy'

[ACTION FOR WEBSITE TEAM: Create a media archive section with PDF/screenshot of each coverage piece. Embed video clips where the content has been broadcast. Organise by year for easy navigation.]

Our Ethics, Rules & Mission (Uddesh)

Red Brigade Lucknow is not just an organisation. It is a movement, a value system, and a political commitment. The principles below are not administrative rules — they are the lived philosophy of thousands of survivors who built this organisation with their own courage, tears, and determination.

Our Vision

[PHOTO PLACEHOLDER: Group photo of Red Brigade members — diverse, powerful, united]

"A safe society with zero tolerance for sexual violence."

We envision a world where every girl and woman — regardless of caste, community, or economic background — can live, move, work, and dream without fear of sexual violence.

Our Mission (Uddesh)

- To empower adolescent girls and young women from marginalised communities — particularly Dalit, Muslim, and OBC communities — who are survivors of sexual violence
- To survivor-led leadership so that lived experience of victimisation becomes a source of strength and systemic change
- To develop and deliver preventive self-defense (NISHASTRA) as a practical tool against sexual violence
- To dismantle the victim mindset created by patriarchal conditioning and replace it with an unshakeable sense of self-image
- To ensure that every survivor has access to justice — through police, legal aid, and the courts
- To build a society where women are trees — with deep roots, strong trunks, and branches that reach the sky — not potted plants kept for decoration

Core Philosophy — The Tree, Not the Pot

[PHOTO PLACEHOLDER: The iconic Red Brigade illustration of the potted plant vs the tree]

Girls are not nurtured to become trees in this society. They are nurtured to become potted plants — decorative, contained, dependent. Red Brigade exists to change that. Our entire work — from self-defense to livelihood to justice to identity — is oriented towards helping women grow deep roots and reach their own sky.

Patriarchy does not only operate through external violence. It operates internally — through self-doubt, self-blame, and internalised weakness. When a girl is told she is weak from childhood, she begins to believe it. When a woman is attacked, she is often made to feel responsible. Red Brigade fights on both fronts — external safety and internal liberation.

Our Principles & Ethical Commitments

1. Survivor-Led Always

Red Brigade is not a service provider delivering programmes to beneficiaries. It is a movement where survivors are the decision-makers, programme designers, trainers, team leaders, and public faces. Every programme, policy, and public statement is developed with survivors at the centre. This is non-negotiable.

2. Rejection of the Victim Mindset

We do not see the women and girls we work with as victims. We see survivors and leaders in formation. Our work is not about pity or rescue — it is about recognising and unleashing the power that every woman already carries within her.

3. Dignity and Confidentiality

Every survivor who comes to Red Brigade has the absolute right to confidentiality. We do not share names, locations, or case details without explicit consent. Case studies published in our materials use changed names. No survivor's story is shared for organisational publicity without her knowing and agreeing.

4. Zero Tolerance for Caste and Communal Discrimination

Red Brigade's community is primarily Dalit, Muslim, and OBC. We recognise that sexual violence against women from these communities carries an additional dimension of caste and communal power — and that justice must address this dimension directly. We do not allow caste or communal discrimination within our organisation, our programmes, or our spaces.

5. Collective Decision-Making

When a male activist formally registered Red Brigade in 2012 and used his position to exercise patriarchal control over the organisation's resources and decisions, the Red Brigade members rejected it. In 2016, Red Brigade re-registered as an independent, survivor-led body. Decision-making authority is held by the survivors and marginalised women who are the organisation's members — not by external well-wishers, donors, or advisors.

6. Prevention Over Punishment

While Red Brigade actively supports survivors in accessing justice and pursuing legal accountability for perpetrators, we believe that punishment alone will never end sexual violence. Prevention — through self-defense, self-image building, social norm change, and community mobilisation — is our primary orientation. NISHASTRA is the practical expression of this belief.

7. Holistic Empowerment

Safety and self-defense are the entry point, not the endpoint. Red Brigade works across the full arc of a survivor's and a community woman's life — education (Balmanch), economic empowerment (Chikankari, livelihood skills), justice access, psychological healing (counselling), and health (Marma Chikitsa). A woman who is safe but hungry is not free. A woman who is safe but economically dependent is not free.

8. Historical Memory as Foundation

We refuse to let the women of this country believe they have no heroines. Hundreds of women fought and died for India's independence — and their names have been erased from history. Red Brigade has researched 250 of these women, focused on 100 warriors, and tells their stories in every workshop and campaign. When a girl knows that women like her changed the course of a nation, she carries herself differently.

9. Non-Partisan Political Engagement

Red Brigade's work on National Women's Day and women's rights campaigns has been celebrated by political parties and governments across the spectrum. We welcome this — but we are not affiliated with any political party. Our work is for every woman, regardless of her political affiliation. We advocate with all governments and challenge all governments equally.

Our Rules — How We Work

- Survivors always speak first — in team meetings, in programme design, in media interactions
- No woman is turned away from support because she cannot pay, because of her caste, or because of her religion
- Every case we take is followed through — from police station to court — we do not abandon a survivor midway
- We never use a survivor's story without her explicit knowledge and consent
- Our organisation's resources belong to the organisation — not to any individual, however senior
- We continuously learn — NISHASTRA itself was built through an iterative process of survivor feedback over years
- We celebrate our women freedom fighters — because knowing your history is a form of self-defense

Our Slogan

चली थी अकेली मगर लोग साथ आते गए और कारवां बनता गया

She walked alone — but people joined, and a caravan was formed.

Veerangana Vahini — The Next Chapter

*[PHOTO PLACEHOLDER: Veerangana Vahini founding conference — Lucknow, 13 February 2024.
VIDEO PLACEHOLDER: Conference highlights and founder's address]*

Growing from the roots of Red Brigade, Veerangana Vahini is a new women's mass organisation launched on 13 February 2024 — National Women's Day — in Lucknow. At its founding conference, approximately 1,000 young women (average age 22) from 40 districts of Uttar Pradesh and 7 other states came together.

Veerangana Vahini draws inspiration from the women warriors of India's independence movement and is dedicated to building new women's leadership across India — from village to city, from self-defense to political consciousness. It is not a political party. It is a platform for women to organise across caste and religion, raise their voices together, and build a new cultural identity grounded in collective strength.

Founded	13 February 2024 (National Women's Day), Lucknow
Foundation conference	1,000 young women, average age 22, from 40 UP districts and 7 states
2026 goal	1,000 active leaders; 1,00,000 general members across Uttar Pradesh
Five-year vision	10,000 active leaders; 10,00,000 members nationally
February 2026	First major national conference — 3 days, targeting 10,000 girls, Lucknow
Funding model	Member contributions (min. Rs. 10/month general; Rs. 10,000/year supporters)
